John is always working or going to classes, he never has enough time to sit down and eat, and so he typically leaves work, and grabs a snack from the vending machine.

When John goes to buy snacks, he typically finds that either the vending machine is empty, or doesn't have anything healthy.

One day, John's college gets a new vending machine that has new features. One of the first features he notices is that this vending machine tracks the stock of each machine on campus.

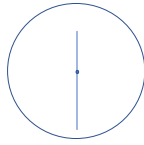

The next feature he notices is that he can request items, and if an item has enough support behind it, the item will be added to a rotation to be tested.

The next time John goes to the vending machine, he finds that there are new items available, much healthier than the previous items, and he knew they would be there because of the stock feature.

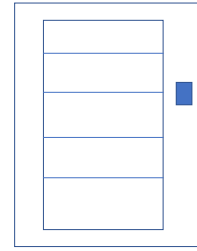

John is extremely pleased with the new vending machine. After work, he heads back to his dorm to study with his favorite snack, satisfied and ready to study for his classes.

Benjamin constantly finds himself having limited time to get snacks or school supplies given his busy schedule

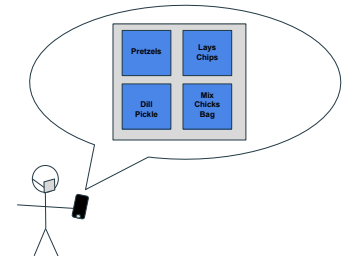

His friend Charles recommends our app that directly links with our new state of the art vending machines. So he can grab a quick snack on the go from class to class.

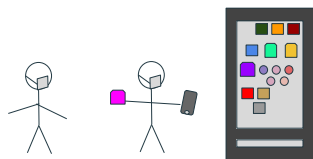

On the app interface the user will be shown a variety of options to choose from ranging from snacks to school supplies

They will order the supplies on the go or can simply interact with the machine itself and get it that way. By using the app they can order what they want in advance.

Benjamin picks up a snack he ordered using the new app he just downloaded, and showed Charles. Why hadn't he downloaded this app sooner?

Benjamin now goes to class satisfied with the snack he's picked up and is ready to continue the day even with his tight schedule.
